Mr. R. W. Coulthard
Resigns From An Important Position

The many friends of Mr. R. W. Coulthard will regret to learn that he has severed his connection with the West Canadian Collieries with which company he had filled the position of general manager for the past two years, during which time this large company made enormous development and added considerably to their earning powers.

Besides having been the person in charge of the large interests of the West Canadian Collieries, Mr. Coulthard has always taken a prominent and often a leading part in anything that has tended to promote the best interest of the town of Blairmore. It is generally hoped, however, that Mr. Coulthard will remain in Blairmore and that the invaluable services which he has so incessantly and untiringly lavished upon Blairmore will be continued.

For the last year or two it has been announced who Mr. Coulthard's successor will be, but it is believed that Mr. J. Monard will be offered the position. Mr. Monard has been connected with the West Canadian Collieries as secretary and assistant manager, for nearly three years. Mr. Monard seems to be specially fitted for the position of general manager for the W. C. C. and many of the shareholders will be greatly pleased if a person with Mr. Monard's tact and ability becomes Mr. Coulthard's successor.

A Narrow Escape

Henry Bartz, employed at the cement works, had a narrow escape from death on Tuesday forenoon while working at the mill. Bartz was working inside doing some repairs overhead when he slipped and fell amongst some of the belts sustaining a broken arm, broken shoulder, and a wounded scalp. He was hurried to the hospital at Frank where, we understand, he is now doing well.

Studying St. Mark Has Been Interesting

Ever since the first Sunday in September last, the adult Bible class of the Presbyterian church have been closely studying the book of St. Mark, and now they come near the end of that noble man's career. The studying of St. Mark's life has been one of great interest, and those whose good fortune it has been to listen to the able instructions of the teacher, Rev. A. S. Tod, B.D., have acquired some valuable and useful information regarding the life and works of that great chronicler. On Sunday, February 18th, the study of Saint Mark will come to a close when some other lesson will be taken up and it is hoped that a large number of young and older folk as well will attend each Sunday for an hour's study of some great life.

All the Towns of The Pass Hail With Delight the Coming of the Electric Railway.

The promoters of the Crows Nest Pass Electric Railway Co. are busy preparing plans for the summer's work. The car shops will be located in Blairmore, was the information gathered by a reporter the early part of this week.

The bill to grant this company a charter is before the provincial house and is being debated by the railway committee. So far, no objections have been filed against the bill and it is not probable that any will be made that when it comes up for its third reading it will pass without a hitch.

In an interview with Capt. W. A. Beebe, who is one of the chief promoters of the new electric railway company and who was in Edmonton last week looking after the reading of the bill, a reporter was told that sufficient capital with which to build the road was available, a large bulk of the stock having been bargained for by English capitalists.

The Captain told the reporter that he believed there would be no opposition against granting the charter for the Crows Nest Pass Electric Railway Co. and that it would be possible to commence work on the road before the last of April. Some of the Boards of Trade along the proposed line have already communicated with the promoters and have expressed themselves as being greatly willing to render all assistance possible towards hastening the building of the electric railway, as they consider that such means of transportation would be a great boon to their towns. The captain further declared that all the towns of The Pass were greatly delighted over the prospects of having an electric railway which will connect them with all the towns between Pinehoor City and Crows Nest.

"Although the exact site for car shops" continued the Captain, "have not yet been decided on, they will be located somewhere in Blairmore, the board of directors have unanimously agreed that Blairmore is by far the most suitable place."

Evangelistic Meetings

The Central Baptist church are holding a series of evangelistic meetings. Rev. Leavitt, of Lethbridge, is here assisting the local pastor, Rev. J. F. Hunter, and will preach at all the services. The meetings commenced on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock and will be continued every night except Saturday, until Sunday, Feb. 18th. Everybody is invited to these meetings. Parents come and have your children come too.

GOAT VS. BOWSER

He Tries to Conquer Savage Beast by Kindness.

ANIMAL HAD SCARED COOK.

Head of the Household Insists That Intruder in Back Yard Had Not Been Treated With Proper Courtesy and Consideration, and Has Demonstrated His System.

By M. QUAD.
(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

M R. BOWSER came home to dinner an hour ahead of his usual time the other afternoon, and he had scarcely set foot in the house when Mrs. Bowser greeted him with:

"I am glad you have come. We have been awful time around here. I suppose the goat has seen a rat down cellar," he replied.

"There's been a goat in the back yard for the last hour."

"Well, not a goat wander into our back yard without an earthquake following."

"That's it; this is a savage creature. Cook was hanging some wash on the line when the goat came through the gate. She called to him to get out, and he came for her on the jump and knocked her down. She managed to get into the kitchen, but she thinks she is hurt internally. The goat is still in the yard. I have tried to frighten him, but he glares at me and shakes his head. Mr. Bowser led the way down to the kitchen, where the cook was crying, and in judicial tones demanded:

"Want you to tell me exactly what happened when the goat entered the side gate."

"I told him to get out," was the reply.

"You told him to get out? Why did you tell him that?"

Information About Goats.

"I was afraid of him."

"But why were you afraid of him? Were you ever attacked by a goat? Didn't he ever mean you?"

"I had an aunt."

"Never mind about your aunt. You say you were afraid of the goat. Did he betray any signs of anger?"

"I can't say."

"Just give him a good kick!"

"Mebbe he didn't."

"Of course he didn't. In wandering through the alley he saw the open gate and entered. He saw you. With no preliminary warning, and without the slightest change of your attitude, you took the goat out of the yard and humiliated him. You angered him. You probably simpered your foot or raised your arm as you shouted, and he had every reason to believe that you meant to attack him. He therefore attacked you. You simply got what you deserved."

"That is hardly the way to talk to a girl after she has been frightened and hurt," chided Mrs. Bowser.

Goat Was Humiliated.

"Madam, your opinion on this case may be asked for later on," replied Mr. Bowser. "I have come home to find my house all upset. I am told about a savage goat. I am told that he half killed my cook. Is it my business to find out the particulars or not?"

"It is not my business," she retorted.

"Because he is ferocious."

"Ferocious? Because she humiliated and menaced him. That was the reason, but who can blame him? A goat has feelings. He can distinguish a kind from a bad one. He can even sight right to respective treatment as a human being, and I shall insist that my goat enter upon these premises as it extended to him. This close the incident."

Goat Was in the Back Yard.

"Do you want him left on the roof of the house? He will do no harm where he is. I do not want my dinner delayed by this incident, as I may go down cellar," he replied.

"There's been a goat in the back yard for the last hour."

"Well, not a goat wander into our back yard without an earthquake following."

"That's it; this is a savage creature. Cook was hanging some wash on the line when the goat came through the gate. She called to him to get out, and he came for her on the jump and knocked her down. She managed to get into the kitchen, but she thinks she is hurt internally. The goat is still in the

SYSTEMIC CATARRH RELIEVED BY PERUNA.My Husband Also Uses Peruna.

Mrs. Bella May Barnes, whose picture now accompanies this testimonial, and who resides at 328 N. Gadsden, Tripoli, Ind., writes The Peruna Co., 100 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.: "Peruna completely cured me of systemic catarrh of several years' standing and if my husband feels either or either of us catch cold we at once take Peruna."

Stomach Trouble.

Mrs. Wilson Robinson, 704 Steele St., Toledo, Ohio, writes: "I feel like a new person. I have never had feelings, no more pain, don't belch, don't burp, eat and anything without it hurting me. I have been working all the time. I have gained twenty-four pounds."

"People that see me now and saw me two months ago seem astonished. It is the only remedy for spring and all other ailments."

Musical Mountains.

In certain parts of the world there are mountains and hills which are sung by natives to sing. In the Pyrenees certain cliffs emit plaintive notes which are strains of a two-part hymn. Two other cliffs in the same chain are called "enquires." When the sun is at the zenith the notes forth peculiar song, not altogether musical. The faces of these cliffs are marked by deep gullies, from which a strain of a note is emitted to produce the sound of an organ. At certain times a stratum of air held between the cliffs and bordering trees, causes the organ-like sound.

The mountains of the Orinoco and Amazon rivers are granite cliffs which sing at sunrise. Tremendous efforts are made to find the cause of this musical note. The music is caused by the rush of the expanding air through fissures partly closed by mist.

Many more examples might be cited to show that nature makes use of principles which have been adopted by man. Not the least of these is the Pyrenees mountain which produces a sound like that of a mandolin. It is said that if the organ-sound dies down the hand which holds it down begins to burn in the sand, the sound becomes as loud as faint thunder.

Begins to Grow Doubtful.

A bold crossed Mr. Bowser's mind, and at the same time a chill crept up his spine. Was it possible that he was mistaken about goat nature? He would have to take a good look at him and humiliates him. You angered him. You probably simpered your foot or raised your arm as you shouted, and he had every reason to believe that you meant to attack him. He therefore attacked you. You simply got what you

A Tremendous Gun.

This tremendous engine of destruction is a 16-inch breach-loading rifle, the newest weapon designed for the sea-coast defence of the United States and its insular possessions, to be used against ships at sea for the Panama Canal. The total length of the gun is 49 feet 2½ inches. It has a diameter of 16 inches at the breech and 28 inches at the muzzle. If smokeless powder is used, it is estimated that a full charge of 576 lbs. will throw a projectile weighing 2,400 lbs. a distance of 12,000 yards.

The projectile prepared for the monster is 5 feet 4 inches long, and it has been calculated that it would penetrate a steel plate 42½ inches thick, if the plate was placed at the muzzle.

The total weight of this American monstrosity is 120 tons. When loaded it is a heavy wheel, hit by one of its volleys can only be surmounted. The French battleship "Liberte" will blow up rocks and sink ships.

Its long, slightly damaged ship beside it. Other rifled guns of large calibre have been constructed for the British, French, Spanish and the Armstrongs of 16.25 in. calibre.

The greatest gun ever built is the Krupp's a gun of 12 in. calibre.

Story of the gun is a range of 12,000 yards. The point of energy and range of the newest American product. It is expected that most of the same type will be used for fortifications in Hawaii.

American ordnance experts are elated over the success that has attended the experiments with the new gun.

O. Henry had promised to write a story for one of the big magazines, but it failed to appear. Finally the editor went to O. Henry's apartment and sent up a curt note: "We don't have that story in type yet, but it will come up next week, I assure you."

O. Henry promptly sent back the note: "Dear Bill, I did all my work in my feet. I keep my promises too."

"Elves," repeated the doctor. "Woman, he couldn't be killed with an ax. He'll live stomach ache for a few days and then be ready to do some other fool thing."

Sometimes dressmaking is a train wrecking process.

Reaching the Limit.

Along the street moved the infuriated mob of strikers. Various missiles were hurling through the air, and the sticks of the strikers met the baton of the police.

Oh, it was a fierce time, and things looked black indeed.

looking the road crew, who were trying to reach some pike of safety. Another wayfarer on the same hunt, came alongside and others who commiserated with the other.

Are they striking for an increase of wages or for shorter hours?" inquired the meek and mild man, when at last they stood still again.

"Oh, no," the other told him. "It's a strike for better conditions."

"What's that?"

"The strike for better conditions."

"What's that?"

WHEN LIMBS AND CHEST ACHIE

Zam-Buk Gives Ease Quickly.

Have you got a cold in your bones? Have you a bad attack of "general malaise"? Do you feel the "feeling-Limbs" ache, mittes seem to have become tired out, back aches, now and again a twinge of rheumatism strikes you here and there. Your chest feels tight and there is a pain between your shoulders.

Cold is responsible for this condition, and a vigorous application of Zam-Buk will bring relief. It is a chafing oil, hot bath, and then rub your chest and the aching limbs well with Zam-Buk.

Mrs. B. Gorie, 78 Berkeley St., Toronto, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Zam-Buk. A few weeks ago I was suffering from a bad cold, and my limbs. I tried all kinds of remedies, new and old, and found very little relief until I used Zam-Buk. On one occasion I took his place beside the other children."

A Little Jap in School
Do you know how many letters the Japanese alphabet contains? Forty-seven. Think of it! And besides, some standing for many words, some for a whole sentence, which the little Japanese boy or girl must learn to understand perfectly. When the "Jap" goes to school in the morning he leaves his sandals outside the door. Then he goes in bows very low to the other children, and takes his place beside the other children.

That is, he squats down upon a floor mat, and begins to study with his head upon his knee. My back was weak. I had terrible headaches, and was so restless that I could not sleep at night. At last a friend told me about this oil, and I applied it to my box and after taking them I felt better after three boxes. I was cured."

—A very queer book you would think if you could see it. For it is set at the back instead of the front. That is, the first page is the last page instead of the second. Ours do.

The letters are curious, too. Very much like the Chinese characters we have seen in the Orient. There is a lesson to write by hand, and then you learn to write by hand, and then you learn to write by hand, and then you learn to write by hand.

The Union Bank Has a Record Year

Head Office to be Moved to Winnipeg

The Union Bank of Canada held its 47th Annual Meeting at the Head Office in Quebec on Monday, December 18th, 1911. The meeting was memorable one for several reasons, in the first place, the reports presented by the President and General Manager were very brief, the former having been unable to keep his speech to a record length, and the latter, which was the main feature of the meeting, was also delivered in a record time.

It was decided to move the bank from Quebec to Winnipeg. This was deemed a wise move owing to the fact that the head office of the branch had been located on Lake Superior and 76 in Ontario, leaving only a comparatively small amount of space for the Eastern Provinces. The decision on the part of the directors and shareholders to move the head office to Winnipeg is a record in the history of the growing importance of the west.

The net profit for the year, after deducting expenses of management and advertising provision for all the useful and important services, was $692,477 as compared with $451,620 for the previous year. The earnings for 1911 were at the rate of 10 per cent. on the capital stock, and 10 per cent. on the surplus account, except for the year 1909, when the premium on new stock issued amounted to $457,000, while the amount at credit on November 30, 1911, amounted to $800,000. These sums with the net earnings for the year made a total of $1,199,907 available for distribution. In 1911 the sum of $200,000 was absorbed in the reserve fund, the sum of $200,000 of the sum of $290,000 was transferred to the rest account, as well as $457,000 transferred to the same account, making a total transferred to the rest account of $365,000. The sum of $100,000 was written off bank premises account, and the balance received $160,000, leaving a balance carried forward of $71,975.

A further examination of the record shows a rapid and steady progress in every department.

The amount of notes in circulation increased during the year by $1,000,000, the total debts by $1,400,000, which now stands at $45,322,000.

The paid up capital increased by $14,000 and the rest account by $1,000,000, the total assets of the bank now stand at $53,434,000 as compared with $45,322,000 for the previous year. These increases also show a gain in the confidence of the public.

During the year the Union Bank absorbed the United Empire Bank of Ontario, which had two branches in Ontario, and a branch in Quebec.

Later in the year the bank established a branch in London, England, being one of the four Canadian banks having branches in that city.

At present the bank has been showing marked progress and enters upon the new year equipped to do even better work.

Gibbe—I went on a railway journey the other day and took a box of cigars with me.

—Well, I suppose you had a good smoke.

—Aye, I had that; but when the train had started I found I had no matches.

—No matches, and yet you had a good smoke. How did you manage a light?

—I lit a cigar lighter. The box became affected, then the left leg and finally the left side. She grew so bad that she actually could not hold anything about with a slithering, jerking motion.

Notwithstanding that we were giving her medicine, she seemed to get no relief. The disease progressed, and became much affected much.

—We became so much alarmed about her that finally her father got a surgeon to come and we began giving her these. In the course of a few weeks she was much better, and before all the pills were gone she was again able to walk.

—She was 1905, and as she had not had a symptom of the trouble since I feel justified in saying that the cure is permanent.

—Are you sure you get the genuine pills which are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had at 50 cents a box or six dollars a box?

—Yes, I am. The pills are made of leather, and the letters "R. T." stamped on the leather. It has been for many years in the possession of the family.

—The leather is gradually becoming Westmoreland.

—The leather is very rich Spanish costume, and European coats, shoes and stockings.

—For the first time in history portraits of the Tsar of Russia are to be painted on the postage-stamps of that country.

Tailor—$20.

Customer—How much on credit?

Tailor—$40, half of it down.

The New Filing System

"How is the new filing system—a success?" asked the agent of the merchant to whom he had sold the "system" a few days before.

"Great!" said the merchant.

"Good," said the agent rubbing his hands together.

"Business," said the merchant.

W. J. BARTLETT, MANAGER.

FOR THESE STATEMENTS IS A PERSON OF UNIMPEACHABLE CHARACTER.

How does the country editor manage to make the newspaper he does, is a question which has been often asked and never answered in but one way. By work. He is his own editor and reporter and frequently business manager, foreman, mailing clerk and compositor. With an assistant or two he turns out weekly a paper which, while perhaps not brilliant, still contains substantially all the general news of the locality. The paper has an influence far greater in proportion to its circulation than any of the great metropolitan dailies, and it has done more to educate and reform the people than churches or the public schools. The overworked country editor is not properly appreciated, for he does more for the community in which he lives than any other individual. He must have a firm belief in a reward hereafter or his nerve would desert him early in his career.

Editorial Notes

Foolish spending is the father of poverty. If a business is not worth advertising it's not worth patronizing. Don't spend your money foolishly but buy from those who are not ashamed to advertise their goods in their home paper.

We notice now just as the ladies of The Pass towns are taking a keen interest in hockey, the St. John Ambulance association are increasing their number of branches in the same territory. We hope that our humane brothers will be able to cope with the situation.

We have a question to ask "A Citizen," who thinks that cinders are not suitable to use in making streets and whose article with reference to this matter, appears elsewhere in this issue. What we would like to know is, would it not be much better to walk on cinders here than to walk on them hereafter?

The Baptist church held their convention in Vancouver last week and during that time several hold-ups of the most daring kind were pulled off and considerable booty secured in that city. We have no desire to accuse those sky pilots of using such drastic and unlawful means to secure money or even being accessories thereto, but, honestly, wasn't it a strange coincidence!

Our teachers are working hard and successfully but they never know whether their work is appreciated or not unless they have some intimation of the effect from the patrons of the school. Parents should make it a point to visit at least the rooms in which have children. Kindly visits from parents have an inspiring influence both for teacher and pupils and if the visits be accompanied by an occasional word of encouragement so much the better.

On Sunday morning last while Divine service was being held in one of the local churches and while the singers were trying to make their voices reach the heavenly choir, the loud noise of a hammer was incessantly heard which too plainly told that some one was violating the fourth commandment. At the evening service, in the same church, a hymn containing the following appropriate words was earnestly rendered by the worshippers, particularly so by those who happened to be in the same sanctuary in the morning:

"If you cannot cross the ocean And the heathen lands explore You can find the heathen nearer You can help them at your door."

We are told that the result will be closely watched. In case we may be called a hypocrite for attending church, we might state that our authority for these statements is a person of unimpeachable character.

PERKIN EXPLAINS

Tells His Wife Why He Buys Flour by the Sack.

HE DELVES INTO PHILOSOPHY

Many Reasons Actuate Him In Refusing to Have a Barrel of Flour in the House, the Principal One Being That It Cost Him His First Wife—One Reason Unheard.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

MIL AND MRS. PERKINS sat by their evening fireside, and all was content, when Mrs. Perkins suddenly observed:

"I declare I must be getting forgetful. I meant to have told you this afternoon."

"Will order a sack tomorrow," replied Mr. Perkins without interest.

Mrs. Perkins said no more for five minutes, but she had something on her mind. She huddled around in her chair, glanced about the room and finally remarked:

"We have been married about five years."

"Four years, eleven months and twenty-one days," replied Mr. Perkins after consulting his memorandum book.

"And the first flour you bought after we started keeping house was a twenty-pound sack."

"Yes, it was, as it happened only yesterday."

"You came up the street lugging it on your shoulder."

"I asked you why don't buy flour by the barrel and have it sent up, and you said you would."

"I remember."

Fear in Small Sacks.

"But you have never done it. At intervals you have come lugging another sack. Every one around here knows where they won't get into a sack, and the same with bags."

"Sufficiently!"

"Oh, let it all go!" said Mrs. Perkins as she turned her head away in despair.

Must Defend Himself.

"But, Mrs. Perkins, I must assure you," he answered, "I have been charged with the hellos offense of buying flour by the sack instead of the barrel. You are the jury to hear the case. I must go on:

"Seventy, now and then I borrow a barrel or so, I might add, to help me out of a pinch. I do it, however, back with promptness and dispatch. If he sees a twenty-five pound sack of flour come here he knows I am still hard up. If he sees a barrel of flour by the way, wait him off the corner to do me, thinking I am in a sharp street again. You cannot fail to see that there is a business point to it."

"Eighty, there is a vast difference in going into a grocery and ordering a barrel of flour and a small sack. When you order a barrel you know what you are getting the grocer gets a fair. When you say sack he takes chances."

"And I've married a man who can't pay for a barrel of flour!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins.

Capitalists in Strain.

"Not at all, my dear. You have married a man whose capital is somewhat limited. He has been reading the mysteries of it. Priceless freight was in his care and he didn't know it. Such reliance was placed upon his fidelity as a carrier that he was not even caulked about his responsibilities."

An illustration was suggested.

A box with breathing spaces contained a Belgian hare.

"Here, you see," said the discurser.

"It's a very valuable animal. I probably it is worth thousands."

"Is that so?" asked the owner of the box. "I never thought of that. Let's have a look at it."

The top of the box was ripped off, the hare jumped out and ran away a mile a minute.

The expressman scratched his head as he watched the vanishing act.

"The last time you buy a twenty-five pound sack of flour and use it up there can be no great advance or decline in the price, but when you buy a whole barrel you may find yourself in a bind. The other day the dealer had much to lose at a time, but suppose we go on and buy a thousand barrels of flour and lose each time?"

"Tentily!"

"And you call this philosophy?" said Mrs. Perkins with a quirk.

"The only mill please keep quiet," he answered. "I am on trial and making my defense. As I was about to say:

"Ninety, flour kept in a barrel is bound to deteriorate. It must lose moisture out of its natural state. It becomes lank, flaccid and soft, loses, tack, hammers, nails, broken glass and other things are spilled into it. It becomes a source of danger. Mrs. Perkins, suppose I eat eating a hot biscuit spread with clover honey—such a thing is not likely to happen, but if it did, I would have an opener that was dropped into the flour barrel. What is the can opener going to do with me? What effect is it going to have on my system? Suppose I eat a tack instead. Instead, suppose I eat a nail instead. Instead, answer me impetuously and without due thought, but take half an hour to think over it. When you have answered we will take up even though."

"The last never answer!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins, who had reached the roof of the room.

"Gone!" sighed Mr. Perkins as he looked after her. "Gone, and she will never know that."

"Eleven, I must reduce the sacks to ten pounds after this, owing to my capital being tied up in exhaust."

The Sympathetic Squealer.

"I woke up suddenly the other night and thought I heard a burr in the room. I sat up in bed, and that awoke my wife."

"What did she do?"

"She acted like me, as usual, of course, and I hope to do you considerate." When a man buys flour by the sack instead of the barrel he must have an object in view. There must be a strong motive behind it. He must be a philosopher, or a man of philosophy instead of a mere whiner."

"Oh, if you are going to lug in philosophy, I don't want to hear any more," said the wife. "I'll always bring in what you call philosophy to help you wrangle out of things."

Her First Wife Was Lost.

"But I have explained this, isn't they the same? It is due to me as a husband and provider. You are Mrs. Perkins No. 2. Mrs. Perkins No. 1 is as you have been told, met her death by accident. She was limping across the street when a car struck her. Had she not been limping she could have got off scot-free. Why was she also limping?" Because, my dear Mrs. P., she had broken a rib while bending over the four barrel to scrape the bottom. This whole question starts right there."

"But because she beat over the four barrel to scrape the bottom."

"For you would do the same. No use to dispute facts. You might bend over the four barrel fifty times and not break a rib, but there would be a fifty-first time. Having lost No. 1 that way, do I wish to lose No. 2?"

"That's all 'bosh,'" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins, who had been silent until now. "If we can't talk without your dragging in the fact that you were a widow when I married you then we won't talk at all."

Reasons Given Sarcasm.

"That is, we will confine ourself to the sour question. You are asking why I haven't bought it by the barrel instead of the sack. Well, with answer:

"Firstly, you might have broken a rib."

"Secondly, the wife who dives into a four barrel naturally uses more than the one who dives into a sack—a question of domestic economy, you see."

"Thirdly, in buying by the barrel you have to pay for the barrel, which is no good to you."

"Fourthly, the neighbors can't tell in this age of deception whether the barrel contains sandust or flour, so nothing to gain by the barrel."

"Fifthly, in case the barrel bursts up you get a barrel instead of a sack."

"Sixthly, mice will get into a barrel

where they won't get into a sack, and the same with bags."

"Seventhly!"

"Oh, let it all go!" said Mrs. Perkins as she turned her head away in despair.

Must Defend Himself.

"But, Mrs. Perkins, I must assure you," he answered, "I have been charged with the hellos offense of buying flour by the sack instead of the barrel. You are the jury to hear the case. I must go on:

"Seventy, now and then I borrow a barrel or so, I might add, to help me out of a pinch. I do it, however, back with promptness and dispatch. "But I have explained this, isn't they the same? It is due to me as a husband and provider. You are Mrs. Perkins No. 2. Mrs. Perkins No. 1 is as you have been told, met her death by accident. She was limping across the street when a car struck her. Had she not been limping she could have got off scot-free. Why was she also limping?" Because, my dear Mrs. P., she had broken a rib while bending over the four barrel to scrape the bottom. This whole question starts right there."

"But because she beat over the four barrel to scrape the bottom."

"For you would do the same. No use to dispute facts. You might bend over the four barrel fifty times and not break a rib, but there would be a fifty-first time. Having lost No. 1 that way, do I wish to lose No. 2?"

"That's all 'bosh,'" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins, who had been silent until now. "If we can't talk without your dragging in the fact that you were a widow when I married you then we won't talk at all."

Reasons Given Sarcasm.

"That is, we will confine ourself to the sour question. You are asking why I haven't bought it by the barrel instead of the sack. Well, with answer:

"Firstly, you might have broken a rib."

"Secondly, the wife who dives into a four barrel naturally uses more than the one who dives into a sack—a question of domestic economy, you see."

"Thirdly, in buying by the barrel you have to pay for the barrel, which is no good to you."

"Fourthly, the neighbors can't tell in this age of deception whether the barrel contains sandust or flour, so nothing to gain by the barrel."

"Fifthly, in case the barrel bursts up you get a barrel instead of a sack."

"Sixthly, mice will get into a barrel

where they won't get into a sack, and the same with bags."

"Seventhly!"

"Oh, let it all go!" said Mrs. Perkins as she turned her head away in despair.

Must Defend Himself.

"But, Mrs. Perkins, I must assure you," he answered, "I have been charged with the hellos offense of buying flour by the sack instead of the barrel. You are the jury to hear the case. I must go on:

"Seventy, now and then I borrow a barrel or so, I might add, to help me out of a pinch. I do it, however, back with promptness and dispatch. If he sees a twenty-five pound sack of flour come here he knows I am still hard up. If he sees a barrel of flour by the way, wait him off the corner to do me, thinking I am in a sharp street again. You cannot fail to see that there is a business point to it."

"Eighty, there is a vast difference in going into a grocery and ordering a barrel of flour and a small sack. When you order a barrel you know what you are getting the grocer gets a fair. When you say sack he takes chances."

"And I've married a man who can't pay for a barrel of flour!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins.

Capitalists in Strain.

"Not at all, my dear. You have married a man whose capital is somewhat limited. He has been reading the mysteries of it. Priceless freight was in his care and he didn't know it. Such reliance was placed upon his fidelity as a carrier that he was not even caulked about his responsibilities."

An illustration was suggested.

A box with breathing spaces contained a Belgian hare.

"Here, you see," said the discurser.

"It's a very valuable animal. I probably it is worth thousands."

"Is that so?" asked the owner of the box. "I never thought of that. Let's have a look at it."

The top of the box was ripped off, the hare jumped out and ran away a mile a minute.

The expressman scratched his head as he watched the vanishing act.

"The last time you buy a twenty-five pound sack of flour and use it up there can be no great advance or decline in the price, but when you buy a whole barrel you may find yourself in a bind. The other day the dealer had much to lose at a time, but suppose we go on and buy a thousand barrels of flour and lose each time?"

"Tentily!"

"And you call this philosophy?" said Mrs. Perkins with a quirk.

"The only mill please keep quiet," he answered. "I am on trial and making my defense. As I was about to say:

"Ninety, flour kept in a barrel is bound to deteriorate. It must lose moisture out of its natural state. It becomes lank, flaccid and soft, loses, tack, hammers, nails, broken glass and other things are spilled into it. It becomes a source of danger. Mrs. Perkins, suppose I eat eating a hot biscuit spread with clover honey—such a thing is not likely to happen, but if it did, I would have an opener that was dropped into the flour barrel. What is the can opener going to do with me? What effect is it going to have on my system? Suppose I eat a tack instead. Instead, suppose I eat a nail instead. Instead, answer me impetuously and without due thought, but take half an hour to think over it. When you have answered we will take up even though."

"The last never answer!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins, who had reached the roof of the room.

"Gone!" sighed Mr. Perkins as he looked after her. "Gone, and she will never know that."

"Eleven, I must reduce the sacks to ten pounds after this, owing to my capital being tied up in exhaust."

The Sympathetic Squealer.

"I woke up suddenly the other night and thought I heard a burr in the room. I sat up in bed, and that awoke my wife."

"What did she do?"

"She acted like me, as usual, of course, and I hope to do you considerate." When a man buys flour by the sack instead of the barrel he must have an object in view. There must be a strong motive behind it. He must be a philosopher, or a man of philosophy instead of a mere whiner."

"Oh, if you are going to lug in philosophy, I don't want to hear any more," said the wife. "I'll always bring in what you call philosophy to help you wrangle out of things."

Her First Wife Was Lost.

"But I have explained this, isn't they the same? It is due to me as a husband and provider. You are Mrs. Perkins No. 2. Mrs. Perkins No. 1 is as you have been told, met her death by accident. Jeanne Russell Booked
Local theatre goers will hail with delight the announcement that the popular and talented Jeanne Russell Company, headed by Miss Jeanne Russell herself and Ray F. Brandon, are booked at The Opéra House for an engagement of three nights starting Monday, February 19, appearing in a repertoire of the very best and latest standard plays.

It has been several seasons since Miss Russell's company favored us with a visit, but she is perhaps better known here than any other actress who visits the provinces and she has a host of friends, won over former occasions who will be more than glad to welcome her back. Since their last tour of the province the company have been playing stock engagement in the large cities on the coast, the last one being in Vancouver B. C. where they were installed for twelve weeks last summer in the Vancouver opera house, and during their engagement here will present the plays that were the most successful there.

The opening attraction will be "The American Girl," a comedy drama of two continents by J. Grattan Donnelly and one of the greatest laugh producers ever carried by a stock company. On Tuesday night the offering will be a dramatization of Noyes Westcott's famous novel, "David Harum," and on Wednesday night the play will be "Emmeline" or "Two Married Men," a comedy that was written especially for Miss Russell and which by the way is one of the most classical comedies on the boards.

The company numbers eighteen people, some of whom have held engagements on the Orpheum, Vaudeville circuit, and will be seen between the acts in some up to date specialties.

The prices for the engagement have been made very reasonable, 75 and 50 cents, which with the reputation of
